
West Bengal 2021 vs 2026

294 constituencies · 5,052 candidacies
two elections, compared seat by seat

Four numbers

BJP: 46.2% of votes

70.6% of seats

129 seats TMC → BJP

Zero returned

Turnout 82.2% → 93.6%

5m names left the roll

TMC fell in all 8 regions

worst: 50% → 36%

Where this came from 15 ECI statistical workbooks covering both elections, reshaped into seven tables and checked back against the totals ECI publishes in its own Highlight report.

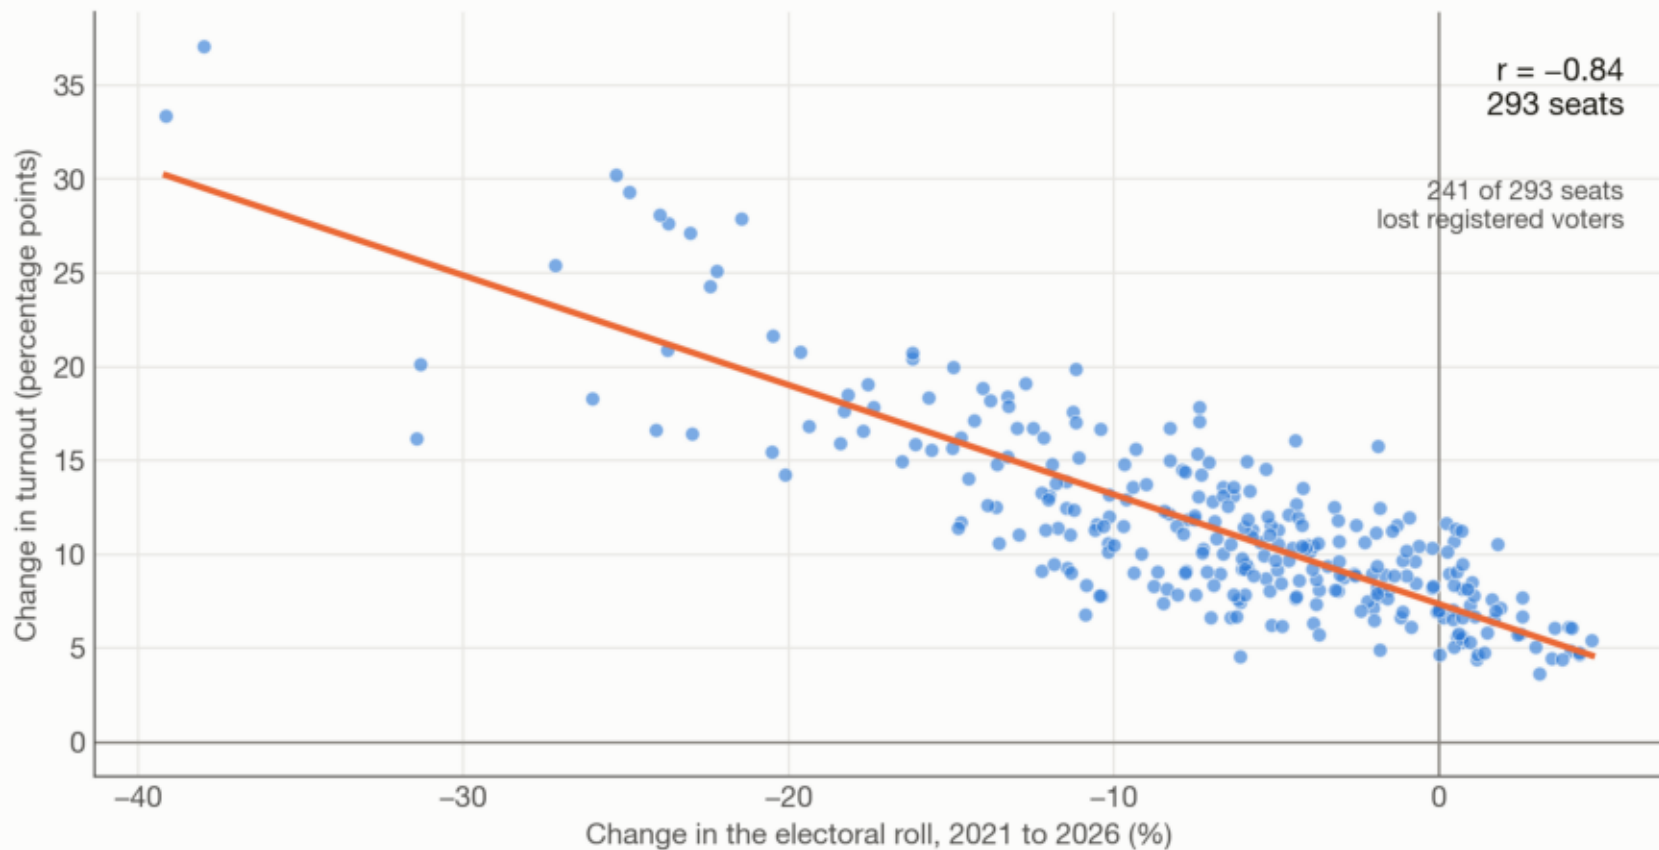

ok	electors, 293 polled seats	68,125,496
ok	valid votes	63,258,138
ok	NOTA votes	494,932
ok	contestants	2,920

Every figure reconciles to the published report. Nine defects in the source data found and corrected — including constituency names that match 0 of 294 across the two years.

FINDING 1

Most of the turnout rise is a smaller denominator, not more voters

Where the electoral roll shrank, turnout “rose”: $r = -0.84$ across 293 seats

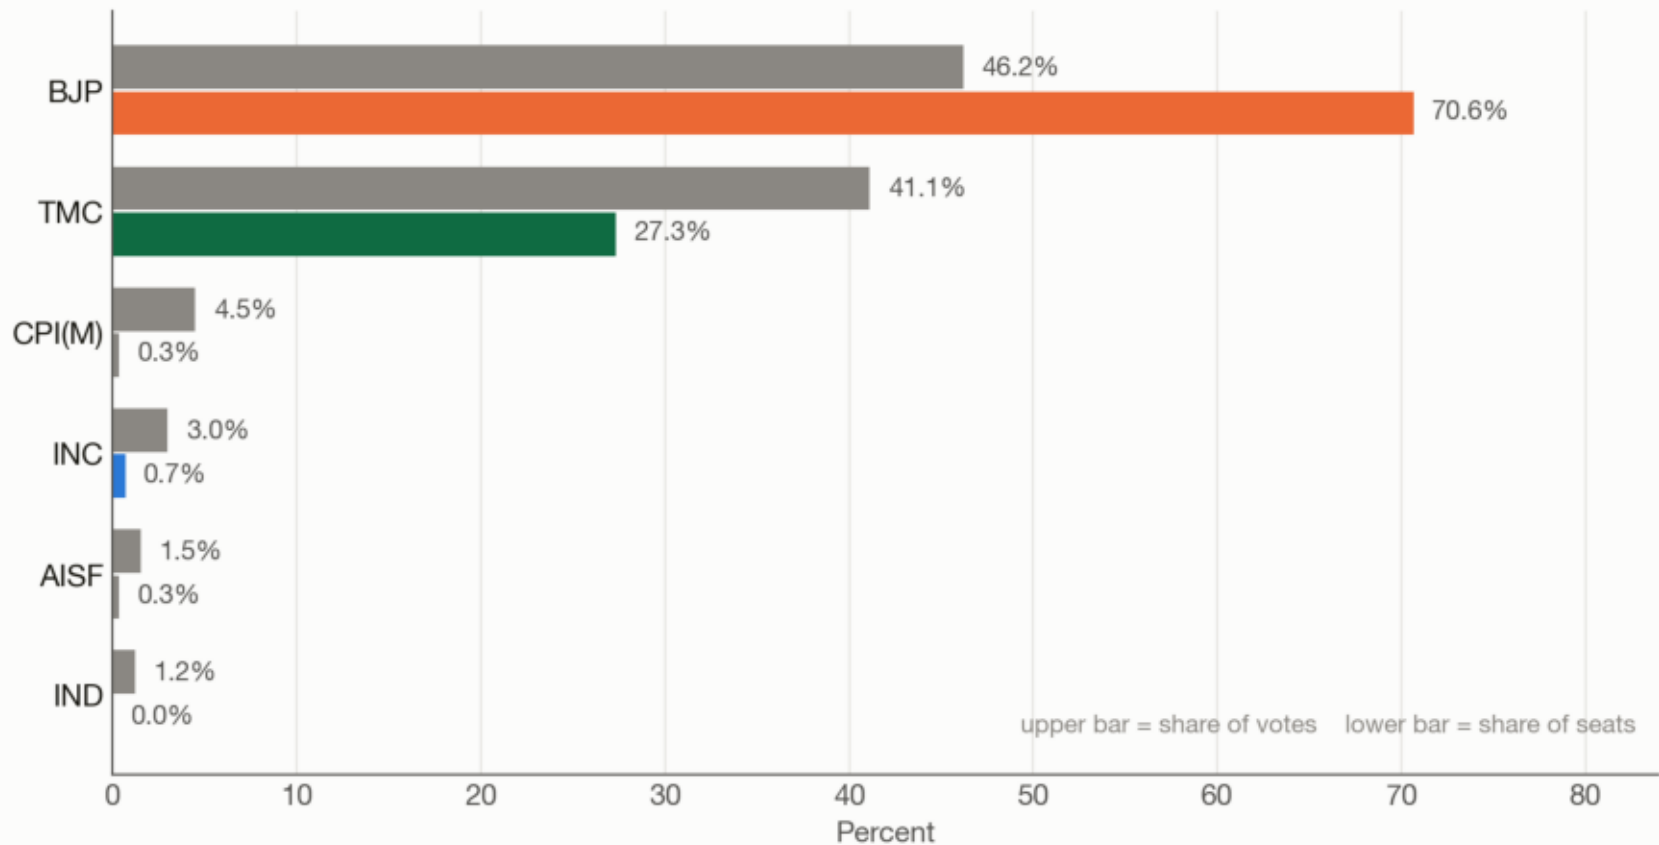

Run 2026's votes against the 2021 roll and turnout reads 87.1%, not 93.6%. More than half the rise is 5 million names leaving the roll. Cause unestablished.

FINDING 2

46.2% of the vote. 70.6% of the seats.

BJP turned 46.2% of the vote into 70.6% of the seats

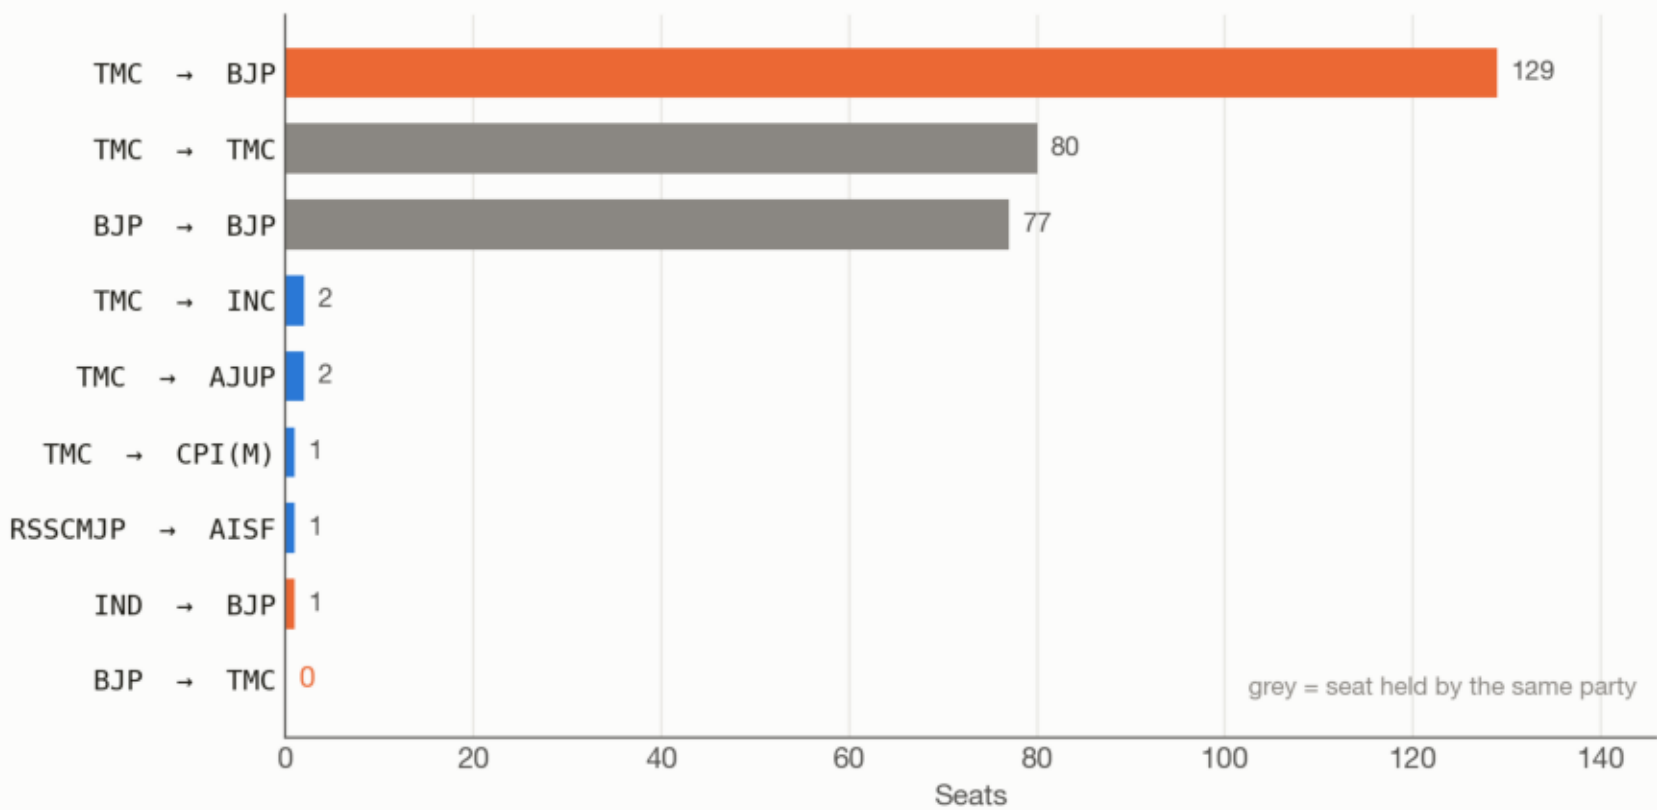

Under first-past-the-post a plurality nearly everywhere becomes a supermajority. BJP went from 38.4% of the vote to 46.2%, and gained 130 seats.

FINDING 3

129 seats went one way. None came back.

129 seats went TMC to BJP. Zero went the other way.
136 of 293 seats changed hands

136 of 293 seats changed hands and not one moved to TMC. BJP took 129 from TMC and one from an independent; the other six went to smaller parties.

What this can't tell you

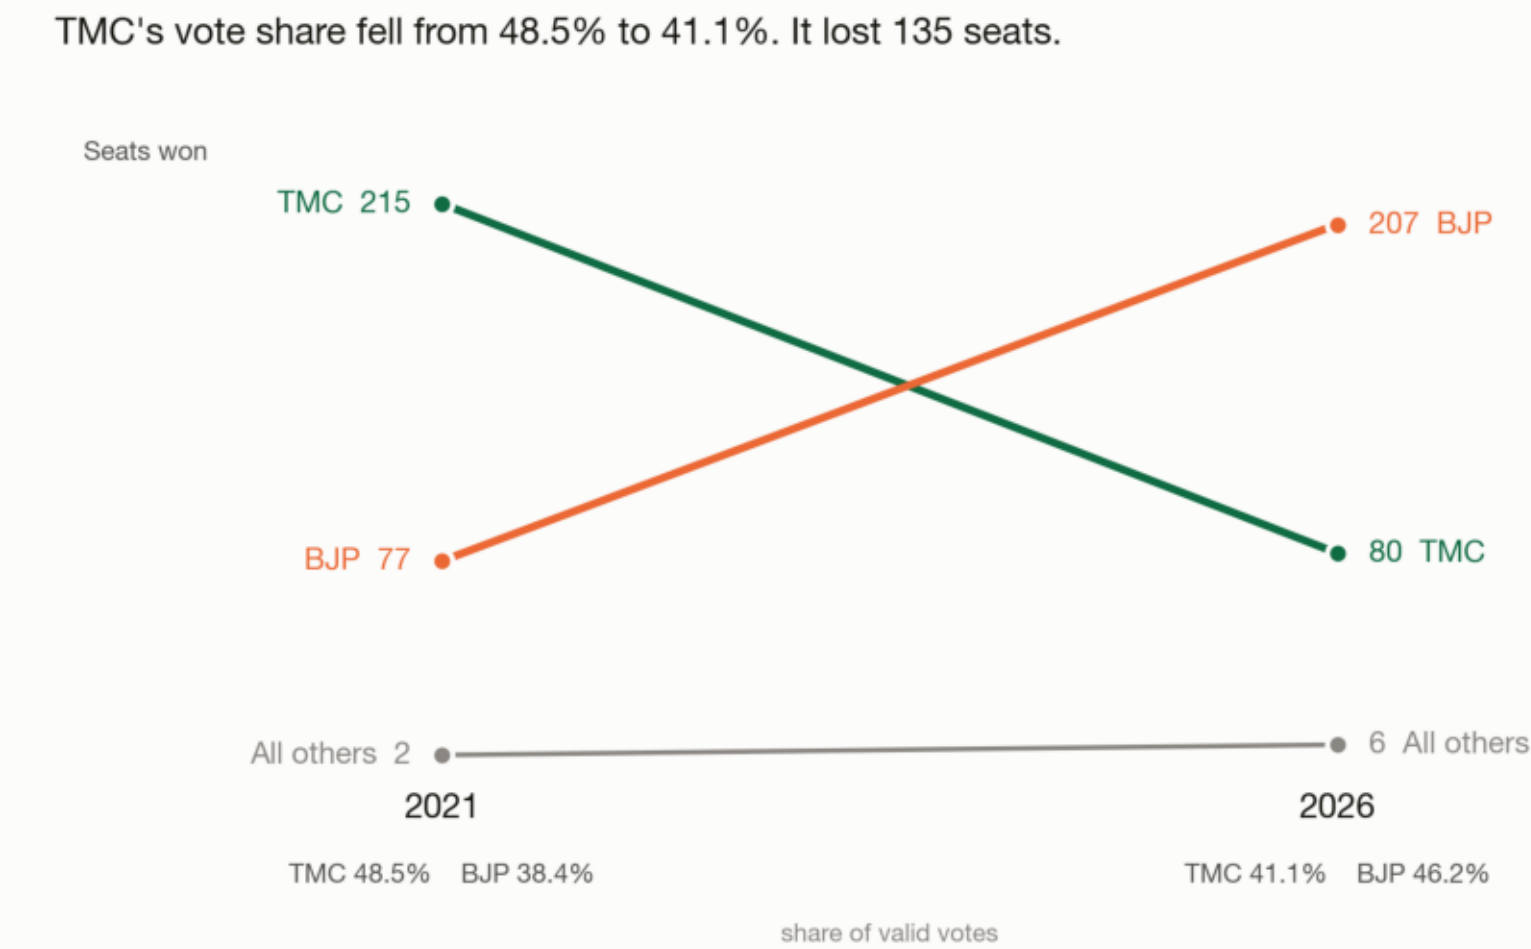

LIMITATIONS

- District mapping derived, not sourced
- No cross-year candidate tracking — 543 of 2,079 names match
- Nothing here is causal

NEXT

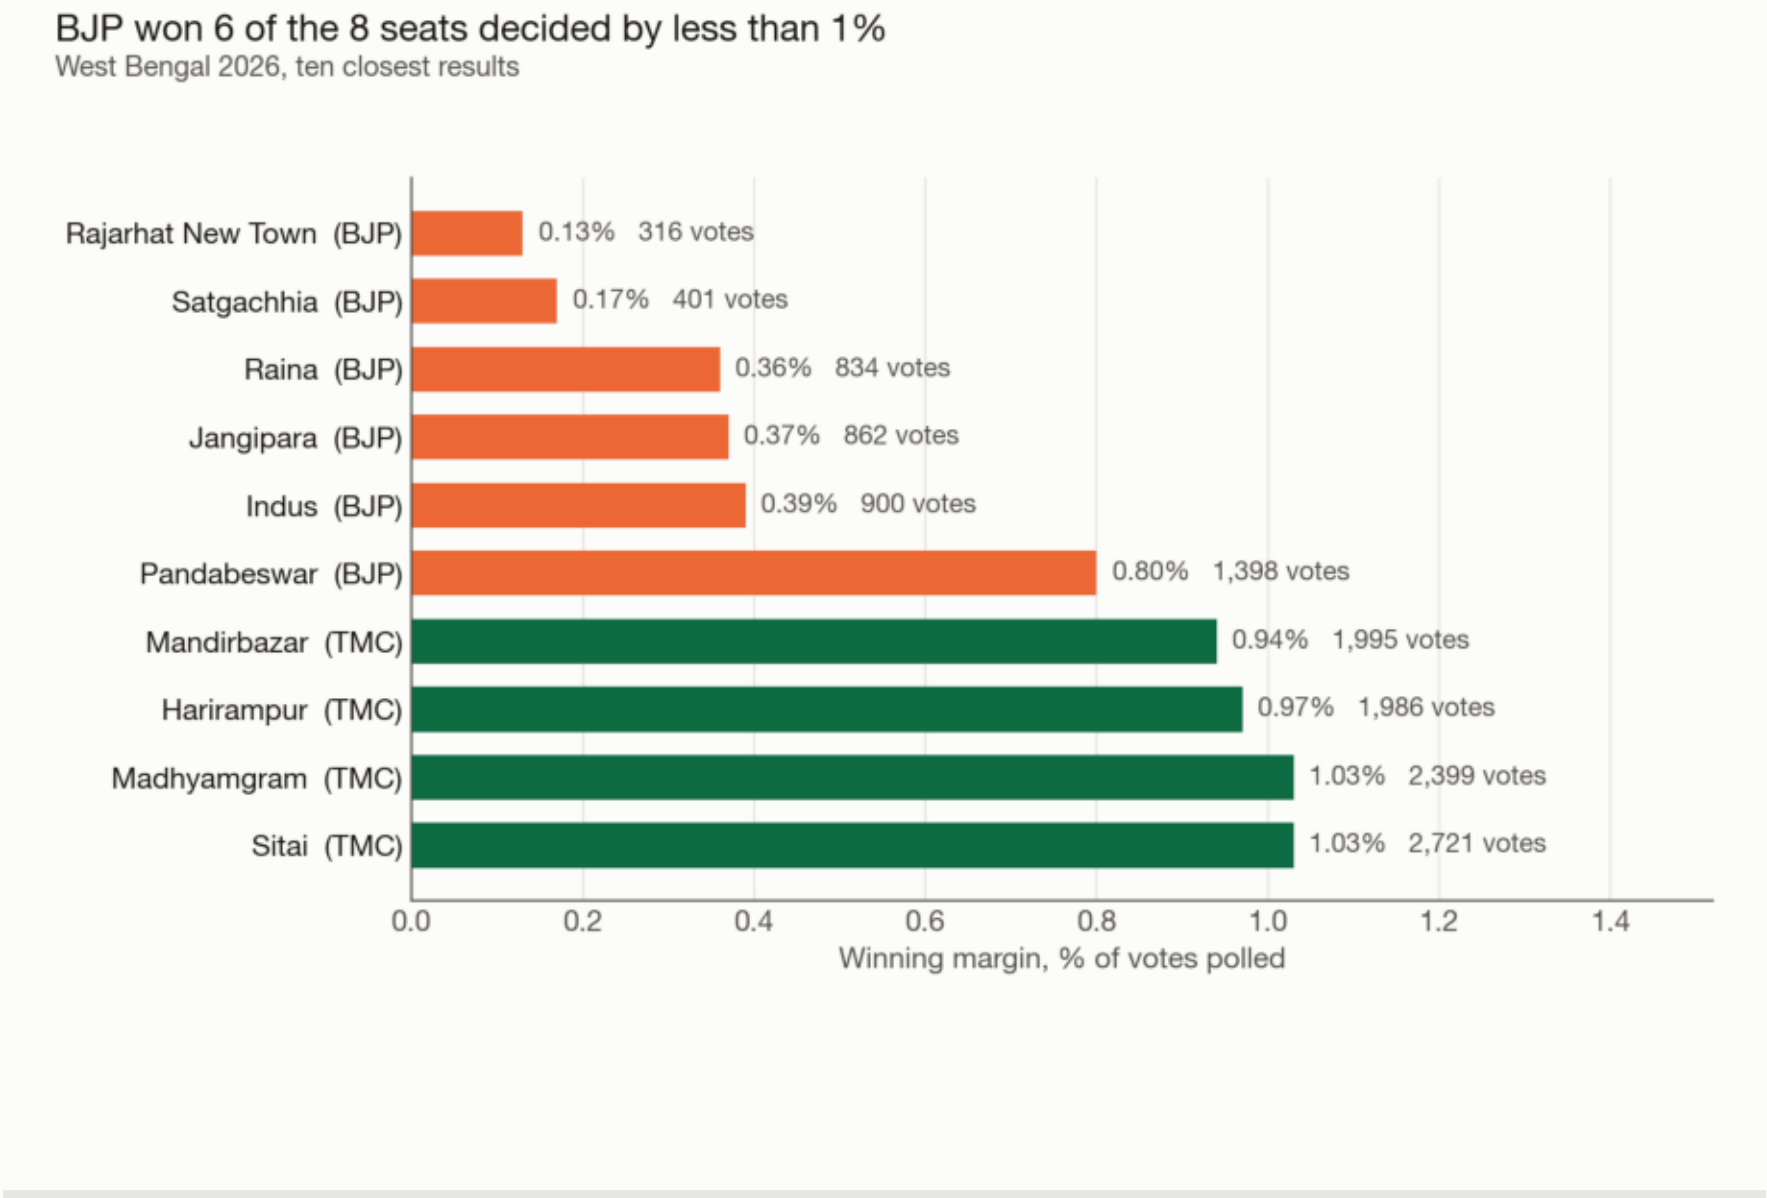

- Find what drove the roll revision
- Add 2016 for a three-election trend

TMC 215 → 80. BJP 77 → 207.

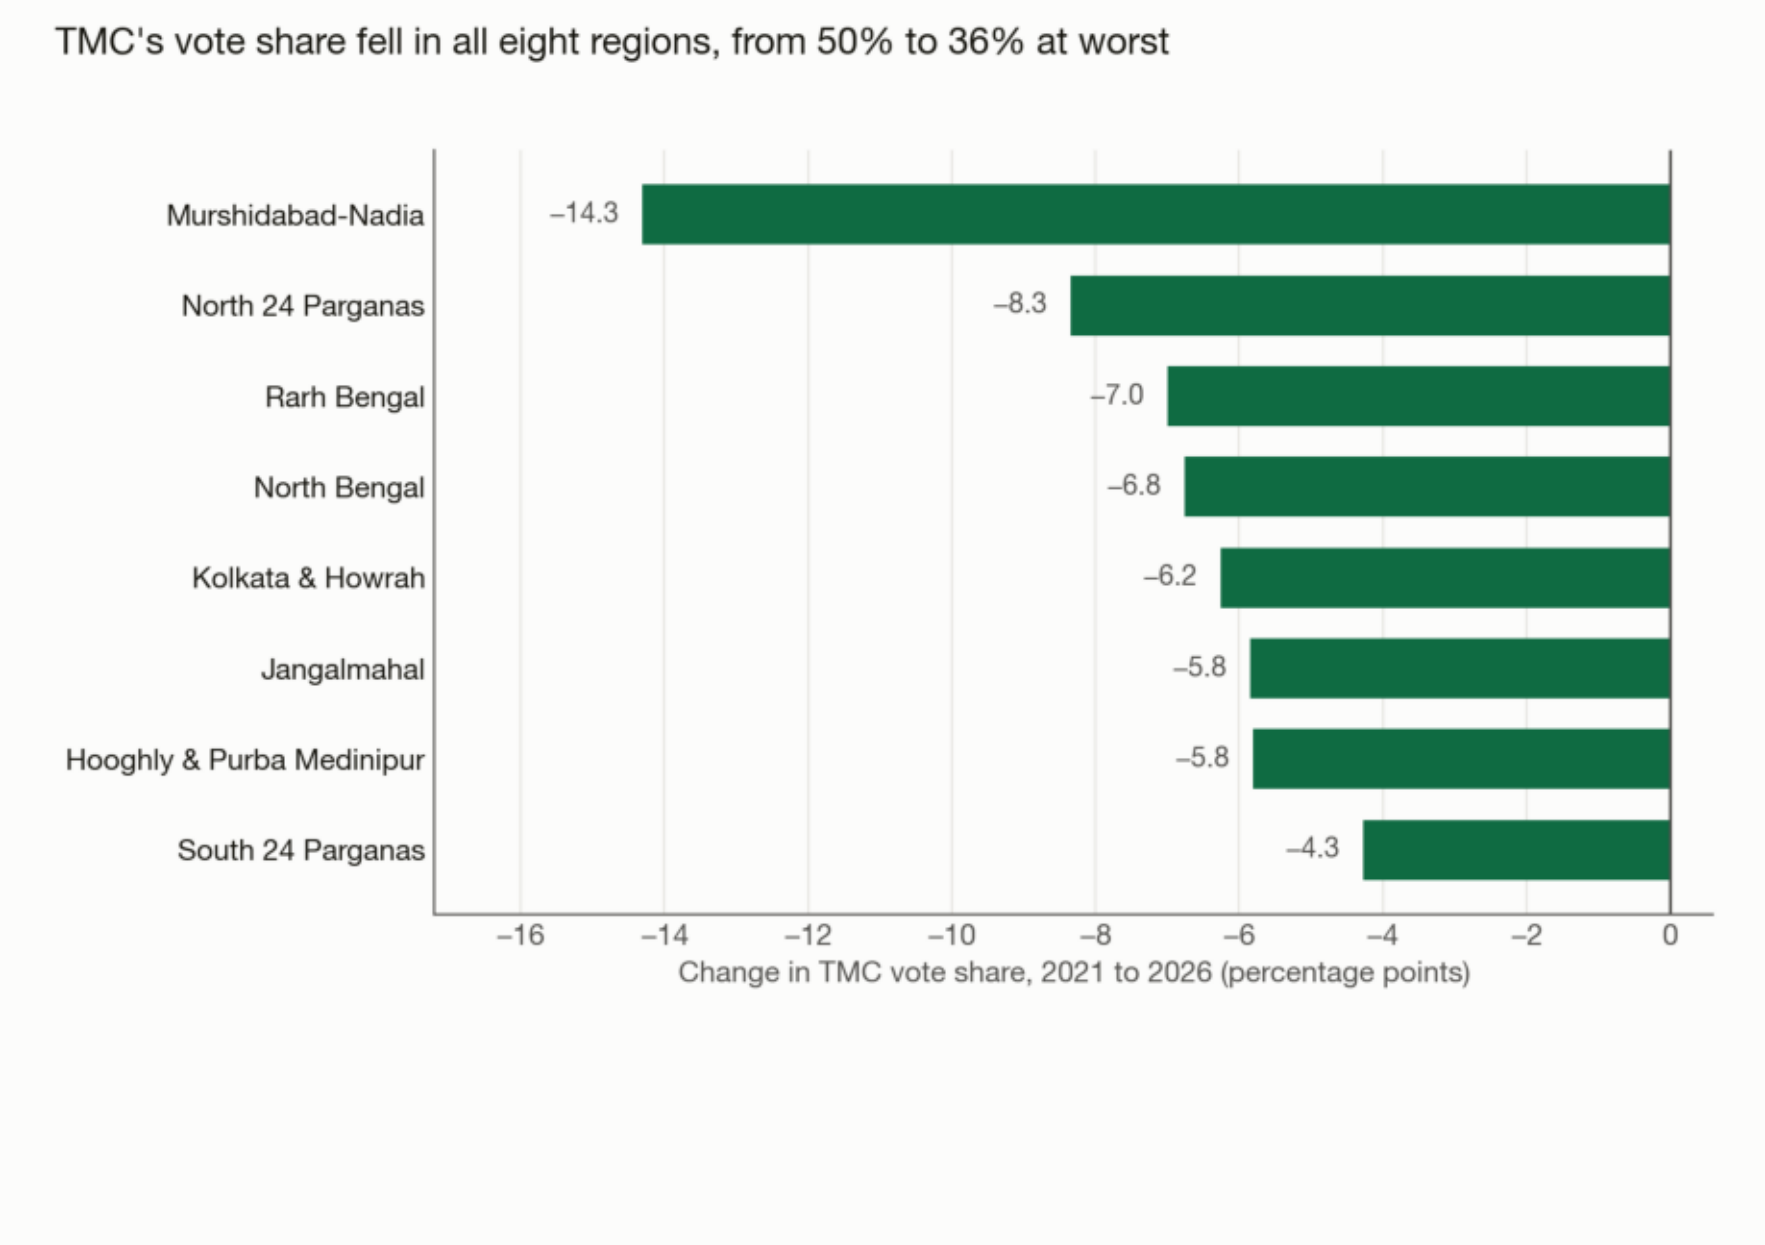

TMC's vote share fell from 48.5% to 41.1% and it lost 135 seats. Seats won, with each year's vote share beneath.

BJP won 6 of the 8 seats decided by less than 1%

Ranked on margin as a percentage of votes polled — the measure that stays comparable across seats of different size.

TMC's vote share fell in every region

From 52% down to 48% in South 24 Parganas, and 50% down to 36% in Murshidabad-Nadia. Regions are derived from district, not sourced.